Strictly, a member of the A. has no right to ask for a free copy of the Synopsis. But it is a point for consideration whether it is not desirable to supply members with free copies of the Synopsis.

11. A Member who brings up a subject naturally wishes to know how it has been dealt with by Govt. Under the present arrangement, provision is made in this behalf, since the Govt communicates through the Dep^{t} Comm^{r}, the orders passed by them on the subject brought up by him. He has no means, however, of knowing how — to a member subjects brought up by other members have been disposed of Under he says a copy of the Synopsis. I fear, however, that few members incur the cost of buying a copy — small though it is. If however, a copy is supplied to them free of cost, it will serve two useful purposes It will enable members to know that subjects have already come up before the R. A. & this will obviate their repitition. Secondly they will realise how each subject sent up by them is carefully considered by Govt & disposed of on its merits. This will naturally bring them in closer cooperation with Govt. —

— For these reasons, I submit that it is worthwhile

I do not think a G.O.
is quite necessary since the actions to be taken under it will be in the a formal order issued. I would suggest
